

Born and reared in Panama City, Florida, Curt has spent most of his life involved with music. He plays drums, trumpet, and bass guitar. Growing up in a Christian home, his father was the congregational song leader and Sunday School Superintendent, while his mother taught Sunday school and was the church pianist for many years at Central Assembly of God in Panama City, Florida. He received his first instrument at age 3.

"In February of 1972 I gave my heart to Jesus and ask Him to lead me in His paths and while playing a trumpet solo in the a.m. service at youth camp for the Assembly of God Churches in 1974, I felt that God was call me into the ministry in some way. I never was able to shake the calling of God. Everything I did was trouble. Everything I tried fell apart. However, when I finally let God have full control over every step I took, things began to change. I now have a great family, a wife dedicated to God and one that stands beside me and lifts me up in prayer daily to the Lord and I released my first solo cd In September of 2006". I am an active member of Galilean Baptist Church where I lead the congregational singing and sing in the choir when not ministering in other churches."

Curt most recently sang baritone with the "Suwannee River Boys" out of Jackson, Georgia. They had great airplay of their single release to national radio, "He's Still in Control", which featured him.
